Bloem Show gives back to the community

The Bloem Show in conjunction with the Fun Fair launched a new initiative this year, where about 500 children from orphanages and disadvantaged communities visited the Fun Fair free of charge on 8 May, the day after the show. The children were entertained from 14:00 the afternoon and could ride on any ride for as long as they wanted. They were spoiled with snacks, sweets and soft drinks.

Several other charity organizations were supported by Bloem Show this year by exhibiting free of charge. This is just one of the ways in which Bloem Show give back to the community, by providing these organizations with a platform to raise funds in a way that fits Bloem Show's core business.

Bloem Show also recently established a Vegetable Tunnel on the Bloem Showgrounds, as part of the demonstrations held at the first Bloemfontein Courant Go Green Expo, which took place at Bloem Show this year. The vegetables that are produced from the tunnel will be donated on a regular basis to charity organizations in the city. The first donation of Spinach and Beetroot was donated to Alhalia Outreach on 8 May 2017. Athalia Outreach is a charity organization that strives to provide a safe home, food and self-esteem to older people.

The Bloem Show beauty competitions were also linked to a charity called JAM this year. JAM is an international organization that strives to fight starvation in Africa and provides nutritious food packages to thousands of children across Africa on a daily bases. An amazing amount of R40 700 were collected by the finalists of all the beauty contests for this charity.

It is a privilege for Bloem Show to be involved in communities and to make a difference in people's lives.
